In the Park

“Ravi,” his mother said, “go and play in the park.”
“But I don’t have friends,” said Ravi. “You will find a friend,” his mother said with a smile.

Ravi went to the park. There were many children in the park. No one looked at Ravi. He felt sad. A ball landed near Ravi. A boy came running. He picked up the ball. Then he looked at Ravi. But he did not say anything and went away. A little later, the ball fell near Ravi again. The boy came running. This time he asked, “What is your name?”

“Ravi,” Ravi answered. Then the boy went away with the ball. Ravi felt sad. Just then the ball landed near him again. The boy came running.

“Hi, Ravi,” he said. “Hello,” Ravi said. “What is your name?” Ravi asked. “Manoj,” the boy said. He picked up the ball and ran away. The ball came near Ravi again. This time he knew what to do. He picked up the ball. Then he walked to Manoj. Manoj was standing with his friends. “Can I play with you?” Ravi asked. “Yes!” all the boys shouted. Manoj shouted the loudest. Ravi began to play with his friends.
